The year of the dragon carries with it so many positive words; ambition, success, drive, and passion. Over 4,000 years ago China was composed of 2 large tribes and many smaller tribes which had animal emblems. The larger tribes merged and chose the dragon as their symbol. In Chinese astrology, the dragon is powerful and almighty because it is made of so many animals. In the Sung Dynasty (960-1279) writings, the dragon was described to have the head of an ox, muzzle of a donkey, eyes of a shrimp, horns of a deer, body of a serpent covered in fish scales, and the feet of a phoenix. How incredible that in a time when humanity appears to be unraveling at its seams, we enter a year such as this; a year for new paths to be journeyed with a radical stride. Change is possible; success and happiness will be delivered through togetherness. 2012 specifically is embodied by the water dragon. This dragon is able to see things through other's point-of-view and decisions will be more proactive because others are allowed to be involved. This theme of cohesiveness & brotherhood cannot be discarded. Take your neighbors hand, reach out to a stranger, change someone's life with love, and come together. Every person is different, created uniquely, and there are 7 billion + on our beautiful, colorful planet. That is over 7 billion minds all working differently, imagining, creating, and contributing. What a year in history this would be if we lived up to the dragon, and became unified. Stop reading, tell the closest living thing that you care; you never know the difference you could make. Cry for somebody that you have never met because we are all one, and a stranger's pain is your pain, too. Wherever 2012 may lead, you will never be alone. Keep the idea of the dragon close to your heart. After all, a revolution is over-due and the revolution can start here.

CONGRATS STACEY!!!

We are very excited to congratulate the ever so fabulous Stacey Alexander on winning the "Pretty-Pampered" gift basket. Stacey first started coming to the salon for feathers and has since received every service from cuts to extensions. She's typically a weekly fixture at Pretty and an avid product collector. She pulls into Pretty in her beautiful, black Benz flanked by her Chihuahua, Versace, and the excitement starts. With a smile that could brighten the darkest space, she is both stunningly beautiful and has a magnificently kind heart. Stacey is hardworking, persevering, and one of the most comedic gals we have ever had the pleasure of servicing. With love, congrats and cheers to you, STACE, you totally deserve it!
